Digital Networks new advisory board

Angela Sormani

Dec 1, 2000

Digital Networks, the venture capital group that launched in August (see EVCJ September 2000, page 60) has announced that it has appointed six founder members to its advisory board.

The new board includes; Stuyvesant Comfort, a director of Citicorp Venture Capital (CVC) based in their London office; Paul Cuatrecasas, co-founder and managing director of ARC Associates; Massimo Prelz, a partner with Gilbert Global Equity Partners; Lionel de Saint-Exupery, executive director of new media and Internet corporate finance at Lehman Brothers; Barry Stamps, a private investor in technology companies; and Deidre Stirling, an executive search consultant.

Nenad Marovac, chief executive officer and managing partner of Digital Networks said: "We are delighted that these key TMT players will be forming our advisory board. They are all recognised throughout the industry as experts in their relevant fields, based on their excellent track records. Their experience, contacts, and insight into the TMT venture capital industry are exceptional."
